Sheep Husbandry.

It is strange that so little attentich has been paid to this industry in North Carolina. If in Northwestern States, where sheep and all other stock, have to be sheltered and fed seven months in the year, it is found profitable to raise them, there is no reason why it should not be a profitable business in a State where shel and fed properly, but this can be done at one-tenth the expense which the farmer in Minnesota has to incur. We believe our planters could make money and big money by giving attention to this business and going into it upon a scale suffi ciently large to justify them in making than there are. No business in the city the necessary pasturage and other preparations. At the very small cost at which they can be raised in this climate, the wool would pay all the expense of raising them and leave the increase clear profit It is generally estimated that as many article on "Assessed Falue of Property" lambs can be raised as there are ewes in a says: flock Suppose a farmer has one hundred ewes which cost him $200. He will raise one hundred lambs, which if ready for market early, will bring him a good deal more than the cost of his flock, and the wool from his old sheep will more than simply stating what every farmer knows ginia leads the ten with an increase of

But says one, I am not fixed for it Well, go to work and fix for it Divide your farm into different shifts and pastures and put it in shape. You can easily do this and what is the use of putting off the matter. Another says if he goes into the sheep raising business, the dogs will be likely to kill them. The remedy for this is to pen your sheep every night thereby making a large quantity of the best manure in the world, and in addition, shooting every dog you find on your premises The Legislature has been appealed to every year for many years to abate the nuisance of sheep killing dogs and we can't get a Legislature which has the nerve to do it. Every member seems to he afraid some owner of a worthless, mangy cur will refuse to vote for him next time and he will do nothing for the protection of sheep Let every farmer who engages in the business take the law in his own hands, and kill every dog with the boys of Genoa," said a gentleman found on his farm. But if sheep are properly penned and taken care of as they should be, there is no danger in this direction.

We with the boys of Genoa, said a gentleman the other day to a reporter for the New York Advertiser.

Dairying as a Part of the Farm Work.

A few good cows rightly managed and properly cared for can be made fully as profitable as any other stock on the farm. But they must be good cows and given good care. No care, feeding or forcing, can make a cow that naturally gives thin, poor milk, give rich milk, while on the other hand, the quality and quantity of a good milker may be considerably lowered by exposure and want of good feed. The aim in the management should be not only to develop the flow of milk but the flow should be limited by its quality. Feeding water into a cow's milk makes no gain in butter or cheese. In the dairy the value of the milk must be determined by what it will make in butter and cheese.

Whenever the milk begins, which should be after the heifer calves, nature finds an outlet in that direction and there is soon an established relation between feeding and milk-giving that may be cultivated to the full capacity of the

To realize the most profit the dairyman must be a close observer and be willing to look after and take care of small things. In many cases a failure to look after one or more of the smaller details is often the cause of the failure to get the best results. One advantage with cows is that if they are given good treatment they are rarely sick. Give her plenty of good, wholesome food and a comfortable shelter, and if she is naturally a good milch cow she will go on giving milk in profitable quantities.

Another advantage is that if the proper care is taken to manage the milk and cream so that a good quality of product is secured, it is always marketable at a fair price. The market is not overstock. ed with really good butter, and it costs no more for feed and no more work to manufacture good butter than poor, so that, to a very considerable extent, the difference in price is the difference in profits.

Because the butter you make brings the same price as your neighbor's at the country stores, where little or no dis crimination is made as regards quality, is no reason why you should make poor butter, as the best grades are not sold in this way or at the same prices. The quality must be above the average, and then prices realized can be considerably above the average. Making and selling butter at 8 or 10 cents a pound in summer and make a special offering this week of a number of 12 or 15 in winter does not pay, especi articles of Furniture. On the list will be found ally when, with a little care in making a Solid Oak Bedroom Suits highly polished and better quality, twice these prices can be readily obtained. In the dairy, as in other work on the farm, the plan that will give the best results at the lowest cost is the one to be followed, no matter what may be in dividual preferences. The plan of feed-which is lined, and a long linen drawer nicely polished, finished in Antique and 16th Century, and setting the milk, of skimming $20, which I will close at $13 and $15. and managing the cream, the churning, working, salting and packing the butter should be done in the way that will secure the best quality of product ready for the market most economically; and, if in every detail this is followed there is no question but that farm dairying can be made profitable .-- The Republic.

Hens. One of our lady readers sends us a note stating that she saw in the Democrat the first of last year that a lady proposed to keep an account with her hens for a you can buy at your own price. Many other year. Our correspondent concluded that articles not mentioned here will be sold the same she would do the same, and from 30 hens she got 1950 eggs during the year. The Democrat is of the opinion that if all our farmers and wives would keep as close an account of all their work as this lady has done with her 30 hens, we would have better times. 1950 eggs make 1621 No 6, Bryan building, over Rogers & Co. dozen, and these at the lowest price

Food Kept for Ages. Eaten at a Queer Feast Given by a Brussels Antiquarian. "I have eaten apples that ripened more than a one thousand eight hundred years ago, bread made from wheat grown before the children of Israel passed through the Red Sea, spread it with butter that was made when Eliza beth was queen of England, and washed down the repast with wine that was old when Columbus was playing barefoot of Brussels in 1871. The apples were from a jar taken from the ruins of Pompeii, that buried city to whose people we owe our knowledge of canning

The wheat was taken from a chamber in one of the smaller pyramids, the butter from a stone shelf in an old well in Scotland, where it had lain in an earthenware crock, in icy water, and the wine from an old vault in the city of Corinth. There were six guests at the table, and each had a mouthful of the bread and a teaspoonful of the wine, but was permitted to help himself liberally to the butter, there being several pounds of it.

The apple jar held about two-thirds of a gallon, and the fruit was as sweet and
